CEDAR  HILL

HIGHLIGHTS

Clean, solar power welcome here

The City of Cedar Hill received a Gold designation from the national SolSmart program for making it faster, easier, and more affordable for homes and businesses to go solar.

As a SolSmart designee, Cedar Hill is helping solar companies greatly reduce the cost of installations and pass those savings on to consumers.

This allows even more local homes and businesses to obtain affordable, clean, and reliable electricity through solar.

Cedar Hill's actions will help encourage solar companies to do business here, driving economic development and creating local jobs.

Cedar Hill joins Austin and El Paso as the third city in Texas to receive the Gold designation.

This designation recognizes Cedar Hill for taking bold steps to encourage solar energy growth and remove obstacles to solar development.

For companies looking to expand, a SolSmart Gold designation is a signal that Cedar Hill is "open for solar business."

"Stewardship and sustainability are community values in Cedar Hill", said City Manager Greg Porter. "The SolSmart Gold designation is a recognition of our residents' and business community's continued environmental leadership."

SolSmart is led by The Solar Foundation and the International City/County Management Association (ICMA) and funded by the U.S. Department of Energy Solar Energy Technologies Office. More than 150 cities, counties, and small towns have achieved SolSmart designation since the program launched in 2016.

To receive designation, cities and counties make changes to their local processes to reduce the time and money it takes to install a solar energy system.

Community honors Lois Cannady's service

The City Council presented the Distinctive Character Lifetime Achievement award to Lois Cannady on January 23 at the Cedar Hill Government Center.

Cannady moved to Cedar Hill after marrying Cedar Hill native Joe Cannady in 1946. At that time, Cedar Hill had 750 residents, two grocery stores, one barber shop, a post office, and a drug store in the downtown area. She served as a volunteer and community leader as Cedar Hill has grown through the years.

In the early 1980's she and five others organized the Cedar Hill Historical Society, where she served as board president for four years. In 1984, she was honored as "Woman of the Year" by the Chamber of Commerce, and in 2002, she was named Country Day "Queen of the Hill". The Masonic Lodge honored her as "2004 Community Builder", and in 2009, the Cedar Hill Chamber of Commerce presented her with the "Golden Cedar" award.

She played an integral role in the creation of Bridges Safehouse, a faith-based transitional housing program, and served as the first board president.

Diane Nash, 'Freedom Riders' organizer in the 60's, spoke in Cedar Hill Jan. 21, describing her work in the Civil Rights Movement.

Living the Dream through service

The Cedar Hill community honored the legacy of Martin Luther King, Jr and the Civil Rights Movement with an MLK Celebration and Peace March on January 21 at the Cedar Hill Government Center.

An overflow crowd joined in song with the Cedar Hill High School Choraliers & Chamber Singers and enjoyed a conversation with special guest Diane Nash, a leader in the Civil Rights Movement.

Nash led efforts to integrate lunch counters in Nashville, Tennessee and helped organize the Freedom Riders in a successful push to desegregate interstate bus travel. In her remarks, Nash offered words of encouragement to young people, saying "you can make social change, but don't expect it to be easy". The event concluded in a peace march with participants singing freedom songs from the Civil Rights Movement.

City employees honor legacy with Day of Service

On January 18, the Martin Luther King, Jr holiday, employees and their families honored the Cedar Hill community and King's legacy by giving their holiday time for a Day of Service, volunteering at local non-profits, beautifying our roadways by picking up litter, and lending a helping hand at local senior citizen communities.

"This event, along with countless other instances where city employees gave back throughout the year, is one of the things that sets this organization apart and shows the heart behind 'service the Cedar Hill way'", said City Manager Greg Porter.

There is a wealth of opportunities for service in Cedar Hill; consider these options to volunteer with the City:

Make a furry friend at the Tri-City Animal Shelter & Adoption Center. Volunteers serve in many functions at the Animal Shelter, including walking and socializing with pets, grooming and bathing, administrative support, and more. Visit cedarhilltx.com/animalshelter to complete an application.

Explore opportunities to work with children, share library information, process materials, assist with special projects and engage with the community. Visit cedarhilllibrary.org or call 972-291-7323 for more information.

Adopt a Street, Trail, or Park – Volunteers can help keep our parks and rights-of-way beautiful, clean, and safe by donating time and resources to maintain a specific street, park, or trail. As a special thank you, the City of Cedar Hill will acknowledge your commitment and dedication with a sign in your adopted facility and a certificate of appreciation upon fulfillment and completion of the adopted period. Find more information or complete an application at cedarhilltx.com/adopt.

People make it a community

Resident Thomas Haggerty is honored by the City for his long-term and ongoing service in Highlands South. Mayor Franke said Thomas' service has been key to the effectiveness of the neighborhood organization.

Bill Pierce and Sterling Burns received special recognition for their part in the capture of a felony suspect. Using license plate scanning equipment in the Citizens on Patrol vehicle, they located the vehicle of the suspect and advised police who made the arrest.

Avoid penalties Understand your water connections

When Cedar Hill residents need to turn water on and off to their home, it is important to know the location of their personal water shutoff valve.

Water is delivered from the source to the residence through a series of main lines connected to smaller lateral pipes. The lateral connects to the residence through a valve, known as the angle meter stop, or angle stop and then to the water meter. The meter connects to home through a service line. Somewhere along this service line, typically in the ground near the home or in the home near where the service line enters, is the resident's house or personal cut-off valve.

their personal cut-off valve, maintaining the valve in good working order, and knowing how to use it. Residents using the City's angle stop valve in the meter box may be subject to penalty fees and the cost of any damages to the valve.

City staff responds to requests for water to be shut off at the meter box for emergencies Monday through Friday

When a resident needs to turn water off to the residence for either routine or emergency maintenance, the resident must use the home's personal cut-off valve and may not use the City's angle stop in the meter box. Homeowners are responsible for knowing the location of (non-holidays) from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to noon. Response times depend staffing and workload; knowledge of the home's personal cutoff location and status is the best option for the resident in an emergency.
