VETERAN WOUNDED IN IRAQ MOVES INTO CEDAR HILL HOME BUILT FOR HIS NEEDS

A veteran has moved into a custom home that was built for his specific needs in Cedar Hill.

Marine Corporal Raymond Hennagir received the new home from Homes for Our Troops, which is a national non-profit that builds and donates specially adapted custom homes for severely injured post-9/11 veterans.

"It's nice and wide open so when I have my table in, I can get around it," Hennagir said. "First time I saw it was like awe inspiring and shock. It's a lot bigger than what I was expecting."

Features also include a shoulder height oven, easy to use shelves, and a bathroom with plenty of space for Hennagir to roll in.

Hennagir was injured by an explosive during a foot patrol in Iraq in 2007. The recovery was difficult, and he was in surgery almost every other day for a time.

Story reprinted from Fox 4 News.

He's refusing to let his injuries slow him down. He now plays professional wheelchair basketball in Greece.

Now, when he comes back from overseas, he is grateful to have this home that makes it easier to be self-sufficient.

"I can't be grateful enough, it's amazing. For one, they did a really good job building the house I think the house is amazing. It looks amazing," he said.
