CITY MANAGER GREG PORTER ANNOUNCES RETIREMENT

City Manager Greg Porter announced today his retirement from the City of Cedar Hill after more than three decades of service to the community.

"For more than 37 years, Cedar Hill and those who live and serve in it have been my life, my inspiration, and my pride and joy," Porter said. "The growth and maturing of this city have been intertwined with my own and I sit today as proud of and excited for its bright future as I have ever been. I am so grateful and proud of the commitment and leadership of the mayors and city council members I have worked with and of the dedicated men and women of this organization."

Greg Porter was appointed city manager on January 1, 2015, and has served his entire career with the City of Cedar Hill. He started as a part-time intern in 1987 and has since served in various roles throughout the City, including in planning, parks and recreation, human resources, economic development, public safety, animal control, emergency management, and public works.

"I am incredibly grateful to Mr. Porter and his family for their dedicated service for the last 37 years," said Mayor Stephen Mason. "He has left a lasting mark on Cedar Hill through his many professional achievements and his heart for the community. I am proud to have served alongside him as a mayor and as a friend."

As both assistant city manager and city manager, Porter has served in a leadership role to bring major capital improvements and facilities to fruition for the community, most notably: the Cedar Hill Government Center, Alan E. Sims Recreation Center, Traphene Hickman Library, the Lagoon at Virginia Weaver Park, and countless park, trail, and street improvements. Cedar Hill emerged as a regional leader in partnership and collaboration during Porter's tenure, working with neighboring cities to deliver innovative services and facilities for residents in the Best Southwest region.

Porter will step down from his role on July 31. The City Council has authorized the mayor to negotiate a contract with his successor, Deputy City Manager Melissa Valadez-Cummings.
